GLOBAL ECONOMY AND BUSINESS LM 56

Mission

Global Economy and Business (GLEB) is an international master program with English as official language, designed to meet the challenges of a global economy and to train professionals for work and research.

All GLEB graduates acquire a strong background in the core subject areas: International Accounting, International Business Law, Economics and Statistics, plus additional skills in Advanced Economics, Business Organization and Quantitative Methods, required for succeeding in the global economy.

Admission

A Bachelor Degree (Laurea triennale) is needed for admission. Candidates are required to have an adequate basic knowledge of accounting, law, economics and statistics. On-line tests are available for prospective students for self-evaluation and, when needed, to strengthen their knowledge in these fields.

Specific selection criteria are tailored to the students’ country of origin.

Organization

The program lasts two years, 120 ECTS are required to graduate, including an internship (mandatory) and a master thesis.

Two Dual Degree programs are available within GLEB: with Samara State University of Economics (Samara, Russia), and with Epoka University (Tirana, Albania).

Students are strongly encouraged to take part to Erasmus and/or other mobility programs during their studies.

Career opportunities

GLEB graduates can have a wide range of professional profiles. Their competences can be spent in many fields (e.g. economic-quantitative analyses, management control, human resources and work organization, market analyses) in both the private and public sectors (e.g. companies, consulting, research institutions, universities) and at both a national and international level.

Many of our graduates have been admitted, with scholarships, to PhD programs in European universities.
